Question 1: The manufacturers would like clarification on the motor voltage 125VDC/120VAC. Do they need the motor to be dual-rated, or do they need an automatic loss of power transfer circuit?

Answer 1: The motor needs to be dual rated (can work either with DC or AC voltage) and have an automatic loss of power transfer circuit with contactors.

Question 2: One of our manufactures is asking for a parts list for the vacuum breakers. Is this something you could provide for us?

Answer 2: Go to technical specifications item 5.6:

5.6 Spare Parts

a) The following spare parts for the circuit breaker shall be available and the cost of each part shall be shown as separate items on Respondent's Bid. A complete set of spare parts shall be quoted.

- 1) One complete circuit breaker bushing, excluding current transformer.
- 2) One complete set of contacts and coils for each type and size of special relay and contactor used.
- 3) One complete set of all special tools and appliances, as may be required to dismantle and reassemble the circuit breaker.

Question 3: Can you provide the existing drawing from Titan Substation?

Answer 3: No drawings are available at the moment. These breakers are an outdoor distribution 15.5kV unit. Not metal-clad enclosed switchgear.
